

Force Field

A stranger left on a high desert road An institute where research takes a wrong turn A doctor who senses everything she trusts is slipping away Dr. Kate Morgan is a psychiatrist at Bellingham, an isolated sanatorium in the Mojave desert. She gives a ride to Wyn Roberts, stranded by the side of the road, unaware he has been waiting for her, assigned to her by a world far beyond her own. When severe migraines and hallucinations incapacitate Wyn, he becomes a patient at Bellingham. Kate gradually learns that he is also the object of experiments by the institutes director, whose actions not only become suspect, but stretch the boundaries of ethics and sanity. As she searches for ways to defend and protect Wyn and the other patients, Kates perception of reality, grounded in the scientific method, becomes altered in ways she could never have imagined. What if migraines and symptoms of schizophrenia were not signs of illness but catalysts for an evolution of perception into other worldsor even a way for other worlds, other dimensions, to perceive us? She must come to terms with what she discovers about Wyn Roberts and her own capacity for love and healing before it is too late to save them both.
